MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Training

SUBJECT : Weekly Report of School of Intelligence and World Affairs No. 33, 13 - 19 August 1971

COURSE ACTIVITIES

1. Advanced Intelligence Seminar

Memoranda and advance reading kits have been sent to 23 registrants for the AIS which opens 8 September. All components, including the Office of the Director, will be represented in the new class. Two additional students will be selected.

The AIS kits contain six items: President Nixon's report to Congress titled "U.S. Foreign Policy for the 1970's;" the Director's recent address on "Global Intelligence and the Democratic Society;" the 1971 New York Times series on foreign policy; Peter Drucker's article, "The Surprising Seventies;" the epilogue to Jean-Francois Revel's book, Without Marx or Jesus: The New American Revolution Has Begun; and the final section of Prof. Brzezinski's book Between Two Ages, which discusses America's role and the changing international scene in the "Technetronic" era. Some classified material in addition to an administrative briefing will be given the class at Headquarters in a pre-course meeting on 3 September.

2. Intelligence Writing Techniques Course

The first running of the five-day Intelligence Writing Techniques Course, designed especially for CT's who have completed the IWA, ended on 13 August. There were 14 students. The curriculum included assignments in such diverse categories of intelligence writing as: OCI special reports; biographic reports; research projects on foreign political, economic, and military affairs; and a coordination exercise. 3. Orientation for Overseas

The normal decline in OO registrations in the second half of the year left us with seven participants for the 18-19 August class. No wives and only one officer were enrolled. Hence we pared down the curriculum and reduced the schedule to one day. In these cases, we draw non-OTR briefers from only OMS and OS, which have special briefing staffs for such assignments.

At DTR's recommendation, on 13 August [ ] discussed with Van [ ] DDI Senior Training Officer, the best way of sending the last (April-June) IPC course report to the DD/I for his information and for his reaction to the report's two recommendations. Van said he would send the course report memo to the DD/I, with a note that the various attachments were available in his office. Van was told that two weeks ago an IAS professional called to determine what the chances were for his getting into the next IPC (beginning in October). He appeared quite eager to do so.
